

NOVEL SONS AND LOVERS, D.H. LAWRENECE’S, HAMLET

¹DR. AAKANSHA

¹RESEARCH SCHOLAR, SINGHANIA UNIVERSITY
RAJASTHAN

ABSTRACT

Hamlet himself, it may be said, is the most life-like and 'original' of his creations. Hamlet is the centre of action in the play. The other characters serve as foils to him. This article focuses on tragedy of Hamlet a fascinating hero The quality of vocation will be varied from the poet and the wood cutter. My right might be love but theirs was need. Similarly, a person who is involving in any profession involuntarily will never have contentment in his or her profession, further, the person will start insulting the devices that he or she uses and gets deviated from the work easily. After graduating from Smith in 1957 she travelled to many European countries, worked as a primary teacher in Birmingham, England and settled near Vancouver, British Columbia after marriage. She suffered from a shocking experience which served as the basis for her first published story, “If One Green Bottle..” which was published in 1965 in The Atlantic Monthl. Thomas affirmed on considerable occasions that her writings are autobiographical. In a CBC Radio interview quoted by Larry Scanlan, she expressed this opinion, “I think everybody writes autobiography.

INTRODUCTION

The character is a mysterious combination of a series of literacy sources and the phenomenal genius of Shakespeare. Hamlet, Prince of Denmark, son of the former and nephew of present king, the “melancholy Dane”, a “Sweet prince”, the glass of fashion and the mould of form, a scholar, gentleman and idealistic, thrust by fate and by social demands into the role of bloody avenger which his soul detests. The cause of tragedy in Hamlet is over thoughtfulness of Hamlet himself. If one takes up an occupation or profession in his or her life permanently or temporarily, one has to mix up with avocation into his or her profession. These two are like two eyes make a vision as the poet, named, Robert Frost in his poetry specifically highlighted in the poem, TWO TRAMPS IN MUD TIME in which the poet mentioned the coincidence of the poet’s needs and the needs of the professional wood cutter. The quality of vocation will be varied from the poet and the wood cutter. My right might be love but theirs was need. Similarly, a person who is involving in any profession involuntarily will never have contentment in his or her profession, further, the person will start insulting the devices that he or she uses and gets deviated from the work easily. Generally agreed to be Shakespeare’s most fascinating hero, Hamlet has “been buried under volumes of interpretation - much of it conflicting”. This is a play so dominated by one character that Hamlet without the 'prince' is impossible to imagine. Now a days, some of the software professionals' vocation is software engineering but their avocation is that involving in thefts which ultimately resulting total damage towards their image. They are least bothered about their reputation just because of their addictions like lavishness, negligence towards their personal household responsibilities due to overburdened work strain, family ethics are neglected due to cross cultural relations, they are totally attracted to several advertisements online offers and take many bank loans beyond their limit and become bankrupts, they will not spare much time on securing their health fitness for which it results several health problems like high/low Blood Pressure (BP) and abnormal Sugar levels, Cancer, Cardiac arrests in the early age. They are more over addicted to several bad habits because to earn more income in the short span and at their early age only. So, they are even ready to do any kind of crimes and cyber crimes. There is no combination of avocation and vocation, while performing any work, there will not be happy and success, more over there will be no ethical and moral values Hamlet too, like all other Shakespearean heroes, is endowed with exceptional qualities like royal birth, a graceful and charming personality and popularity among his own countrymen. He is essentially a scholar and thinker, and his noble brain conceives the finest thoughts. He is religious-minded and is very sensitive. Despite possessing such noble qualities which rank him above the other characters, the 'tragic flaw' in his character, leads to his downfall. . The tragic flaw in the character is that he thinks too much We may equate Lawrence with Paul Morel, his father with Walter Morel, his mother with Gertrude, his elder brother William Morel, his sister Ada with Annie, Jessie chambers with Mirian but not without a difference. Similarly, the geography and events can also be compared. There are many parallels and identities between the real life events and those in the fictional world.

Jessie chambers in her book D.H. Lawrence: A Personal Record confesses that Sons and Lovers is an autobiographical novel that has the story of his mother's married life as focus. Lawrence had elected to deal with the big and difficult subject of his family and the interactions of the various relationships. She points out Lawrence's strange obsessions with his mother. He wanted to make his mother Supreme and he had to make many distortions. This had caused many deviations or differences between the real life of Lawrence and his hero. But the novel definitely is autobiographical though there may be differences between real life and art. A fearful childhood, judged from one point of view but from another how rich in the elemental drama that a child could understand and a man never forget. They cloaved like champions to their mother. They despised their father. His father slunk away. Inevitably the mother's starved spirit sought satisfaction through her sons. When the eldest died, the youngest son became her man. Paul Morel decides "she is to live the life, of which she had been cheated, through him; he would bring the spiritual fulfilment she longed for." He had no ambition for himself but all for her. Thus we can say that Sons and Lovers is the story of Paul Morel's desperate attempts to break away from the tie that was strangling him. All unconsciously his mother had roused in him the stirrings of sexual desire. She had, by sheer intensity of her diverted affection made him a man before his time. For example when Paul fell sick, he had the first realisation thus:

CONCLUSION

My right might be love but theirs was need. Similarly, a person who is involving in any profession involuntarily will never have contentment in his or her profession, further, the person will start insulting the devices that he or she uses and gets deviated from the work easily. After graduating from Smith in 1957 she travelled to many European countries, worked as a primary teacher in Birmingham, England and settled near Vancouver, British Columbia after marriage. She suffered from a shocking experience which served as the basis for her first published story, "If One Green Bottle.." which was published in 1965 in The Atlantic Monthl. popularity among his own countrymen. He is essentially a scholar and thinker, and his noble brain conceives the finest thoughts. He is religious-minded and is very sensitive. Despite possessing such noble qualities which rank him above the other characters, the 'tragic flaw' in his character, leads to his downfall. . The tragic flaw in the character is that he thinks too much We may equate Lawrence with Paul Morel, his father with Walter Morel, his mother with Gertrude, his elder brother William Morel, his sister Ada with Annie, Jessie chambers with Mirian but not without a difference. Similarly, the geography and events can also be compared. There are many parallels and identities between the real life events and those in the fictional world.

Copyright © 2017 Published by kaav publications. All rights reserved www.kaavpublications.org

Bibliography:

- Galbraith, Astrid. New England as Poetic Landscape: Henry David Thoreau and Robert Frost. New York: Peter Lang, 2003.
- Gerber, Philip L. Robert Frost. Rev. ed. Boston: Twayne, 1982.
- Lathem, Edward Connery. Robert Frost: A Biography. New York: Holt, Rinehart and Winston, 1981.
- A.C.: Shakespeare tragedy, Atlanta Publication, New Delhi. (1989).
- Brandes George: William Shakespeare: A critical study, William Heinemann, London 44 Museum street (1914).
- Stopford A.: On Ten plays of Shakespeare, London Constable and company Ltd, Great Britain (1937).
- Brooke Nicholas: Shakespeare's Early Tragedies, Methuen & Co. Ltd., London (1968).
- Brown, John Russell: Shakespeare's Dramatic Style, Heinemann London (1970).
- Oscar James: A Shakespeare Encyclopaedia, Associate Editor, Edward G. Quinn Methuen and Co., Ltd., London (1974).
- Louis, Ligouis Email: A History of English literature, Macmillan, London (1961).
- Chambers, E.K.: William Shakespeare, oxford University Press, oxford (1930).
- Charlton H.B.: Shakespearian Tragedy, Cambridge University Press, London (1952).
- Clemen, W.H. : the Development of Shakespeare's Imagery, Methuen, London (1977)
- Dusinberre, Juliet. Shakespeare and the Nature of Women. London: MacMillan Press, 1975.
- Hancock, Emily. The Girl Within. New York: Fawcett Columbia, 1989.
- Anupama Vohara, Postmodernism Feminism in the Fiction of Audrey Thomas, (New Delhi: Anmol Publishers, 2009), p.33
- D.H. Lawrence: A collection of critical Essays. Ed. Mark Spilka. U.S.A. Prentice-Hall, 1963.
- D.H. Lawrence: A critical study of the Major Novels and other writings. Ed. A.H. Gomme. U.K.: The Harvester Press, 1978.